Breakdown of Funds

Living Expenses

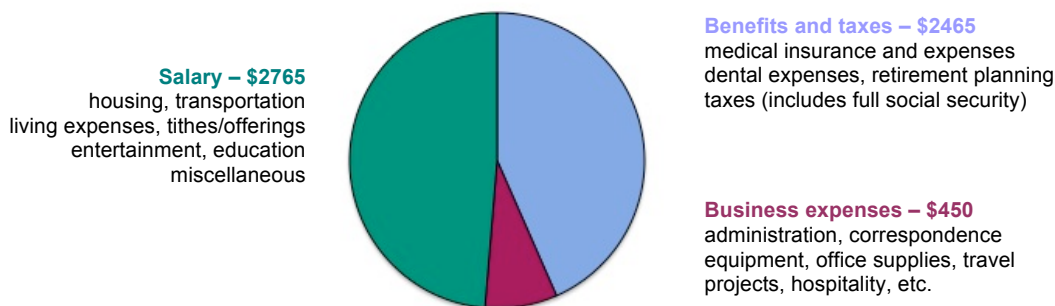

The amount recommended for living expenses covers personal costs such as: groceries, clothing, housing, vehicle expenses, household supplies, giving, etc.

Business Expenses

Missionaries are personally responsible for the costs relating to their ministry, and the recommended amount is intended to enable them to minister effectively. These expenses include ministry-related travel expenses (getting to and from their field of service, furlough, passports, visas, vaccinations, etc); equipment and supplies needed for their ministry such as computers, printers, books, software, office supplies, paper and toner; communication expenses such as e-mail and Internet fees, prayer cad and newsletter expenses, postage and printing; field safety and administrative fees.

Benefits and Taxes

Missionaries are responsible for their own benefits and taxes. For instance, missionaries must pay twice as much into Social Security as the typical US employee, because they are paying both the employee and the employer share. They also must fund their retirement on their own and pay the entire costs of their medical, dental, and life insurance premiums.

One-Time Gifts Discipleship Fund

We are very involved with the students we are training and really value time and experience outside of the office and classroom setting, whether in our home or out in the local community. One-time gifts to this fund help to provide some opportunities for "life on life" discipleship.

$10 * 50 students * 2 semesters = $1000/yr

Partner With Us!

Ideally we are looking for people who will make a commitment to support us monthly throughout the years of our ministry. The most efficient and convenient way to make regular monthly contribution is with EFT (Electronic Funds Transfer). Other options are by check, phone, or on-line. See www.ntm.org/keith_stanton/give/ for more info.

In addition to our monthly needs we have some expenses specifically related to supplementing our ministry (see "One Time Gifts")

All donations go through New Tribes Mission headquarters into our account and are tax-deductible with the entire amount going directly to us and our ministry.
